

Yesterday

Tomorrow

BA

BAIK ART

LES FRONTIÈRES DU SUD

LES FRONTIÈRES DU SUD
LES FRONTIÈRES DU SUD
LES FRONTIÈRES DU SUD
LES FRONTIÈRES DU SUD
LES FRONTIÈRES DU SUD

Baik Art is pleased to present Yesterday-Tomorrow, a group exhibition featuring works by Juan Capistran, Rakeem Cunningham, Aaron Sandnes, and Taravat Talepasand. This installation examines the marginalizing effects of polarized institutional governance on a country's inhabitants during times of political campaign. Reflecting on tensions associated with partisan representation, this show questions the efficacy of promoting value systems through codices of pre-ordained thought— An inquiry that reminds us how socio-political problems of our past, if not re-evaluated equitably, will inevitably become the obstacles of our tomorrow. Yesterday-Tomorrow will be on view from March 21st – April 25, 2020.

Why does economic growth insinuate exploitation? How do acts of inclusion trigger radicalized congregation? And what links the empowerment of oppressed individuals to the creation of an adversarial villain? All are questions often subverted within the discourse of political correctness and patriotism. Therefore, we must challenge this fixation on what's right and wrong and good or evil— as these metrics lack the empathy to overcome our perpetual need for a loser. Works in this exhibition utilize motifs associated with anarchist philosophy to challenge paradoxical notions that have yielded a political zero-sum game.

Rakeem Cunningham
Queer Negro Composition #3
2020
Photograph print
48 x 72 inches

Greeting visitors is Rakeem Cunningham's photographic portrait, Queer Negro Composition #3, in which his body is formalized by its integration into a broader assemblage of various personal belongings. Viewers are confronted by the artist's bare body as it shuns any proverbial gaze and affirms its precarious balance on a single foot, firmly mounted on a fallen American flag. A nationalist signal for dire distress and instances of extreme danger, the inverted flag rests beside culturally disparate and banal artifacts, further placing the body in a state of uncertainty. Perhaps intended as an allegorical nod to this country's relationship to the proletariat class and people of color, the collaged imagery also asserts a foreboding presence where the individual continues to be displaced rather than affirmed by a cohesive and equitable whole.

بنك العراق المركزي

بنك العراق المركزي

سد الفديسية

سد الفديسية

مائتان وخمسون ديناراً

مائتان وخمسون ديناراً

ورقة نقدية صادرة بموجب القانون
عن البنك المركزي العراقي

ورقة نقدية صادرة بموجب القانون
عن البنك المركزي العراقي

٢٢٦٢

٢٢٦٢

١٩٩٥ - ١٤١٥ هـ

١٩٩٥ - ١٤١٥ هـ

بنك العراق المركزي

بنك العراق المركزي

سد الفديسية

سد الفديسية

مائتان وخمسون ديناراً

مائتان وخمسون ديناراً

ورقة نقدية صادرة بموجب القانون
عن البنك المركزي العراقي

ورقة نقدية صادرة بموجب القانون
عن البنك المركزي العراقي

٢٧٧٢

٢٧٧٢

١٩٩٥ - ١٤١٥ هـ

١٩٩٥ - ١٤١٥ هـ

بنك العراق المركزي

بنك العراق المركزي

سد الفديسية

سد الفديسية

مائتان وخمسون ديناراً

مائتان وخمسون ديناراً

ورقة نقدية صادرة بموجب القانون
عن البنك المركزي العراقي

ورقة نقدية صادرة بموجب القانون
عن البنك المركزي العراقي

٧٤٣٢

٧٧٣٢

١٩٩٥ - ١٤١٥ هـ

١٩٩٥ - ١٤١٥ هـ

Exploring issues of social justice, Taravat Talepasand's body of work speaks to the troubled, yet hopeful, differences between governments and their female citizens. Driven to dissolve what's tolerable and taboo, Talapasand's Opium Tear paintings reveal a political relationship between historically fetishized floral signifiers and the heavily regulated/trafficked nature of such substances. Further denoting government inflicted trauma, the artist defaces real Iraqi Dinar (found during the Iraq War) with the words "Endless War." The text, phonetically arranged, reads as both a declarative statement and visual design. Seeming to liken the phrase, and its weighted geopolitical implications, indistinguishably from the currency and economic systems for which it finds itself affixed.

Taravat Talepasand
END-LESS-WAR
2020

LSD and Watercolor on Iraqi dinar with Saddam Hussein
12.5 x 17.5 inches

Taravat Talepasand
Opium Tears II
2017
Egg tempera on linen
21.5 x 17.5 inches (framed)

Opium Tears I
2017
Egg tempera on linen
21.5 x 17.5 inches (framed)

Yesterday-Tomorrow (installation view), Baik Art, Los Angeles

Juan Capistran
Les Frontières On Sen Fout
2020

Pigs blood painted installation
95 x 233 inches

Juan Capistran's mural on the gallery's interior wall relates to the artist's continued tradition of producing works within the urban environment as he investigates the ways communities are defined by, and respond to, socio-political turmoil. Freestanding prints, available to take, pose obscure text and imagery which evoke sentiments of loss, corruption, unity, and rebellion. The act of disseminating such charged pictorial information, in a highly politicized climate, presents us with an incomplete, yet empowered, understanding of these images as viewers are informed only by their collective assumptions. Challenging traditions of democratic assembly, Juan reveals a reality where those within a community or nation are unjustly manipulated through channels of classification, conjecture, and misinformation.

This Text Is The Beginning Of A Plan
2016
Stack of paper prints
6.5 x 19.25 x 13 inches

I Can Never Forget This Memory
2016
Acrylic and graphite on paper
14.25 x 30 inches

I Can Never Remember What It Was Like
2016
Acrylic and graphite on paper
14.25 x 30 inches

I Can Never Be Your Enemy
2016
Acrylic and graphite on paper
14.25 x 30 inches

I Can Never Cease And Desist
2016
Acrylic and graphite on paper
14.25 x 30 inches

I Can Never Fuck Off And Die
2016
Acrylic and graphite on paper
14.25 x 30 inches

I CAN NEVER REMEMBER WHAT IT WAS LIKE

I CAN NEVER BE YOUR ENEMY

I CAN NEVER CEASE AND DESIST

Beyond Juan's prints are drawings by Aaron Sandnes from his series, Deep Incompleteness which utilize found language within punk sub-genres and personal encounters to create moments of political innuendo. Phrases such as "Fuck Off and Die" are paired with the artist's mantra, "I can never" as a way to illustrate the tensions between social distress and his personal capabilities. The mirrored text further implicates the body as it implies one's reflection within each statement and vaguely connotes this language as verbiage for both victim and aggressor. Painted in diluted red and blue acrylics, the layered drawings involve a retracing of each phrase until a deep purple is achieved. Perhaps insinuating the color of blood, the red and blue of a police siren, or even the US's two major political factions—the incompleteness alluded to in this series depicts a largely divided understanding of patriotism and sheds light on feelings of political alienation.

I CAN NEVER FORGET THIS MEMORY

I CAN NEVER REMEMBER WHAT IT WAS LIKE

I CAN NEVER BE YOUR ENEMY

I CAN NEVER CEASE AND DESIST

I CAN NEVER FUCK OFF AND DIE

Empire does not confront us like subject, facing us, but like an environment that is hostile to us

© 2020 Baik Art

This eCatalogue is published in conjunction with Yesterday-Tomorrow at Baik Art Los Angeles from March 21st through April 25, 2020.

No portion of this eCatalogue may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system or transmitted in any form, or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise without the prior written permission from the writer, artists and Baik Art.

For inquiries, please contact:
baik@baikart.com
josh@baikart.com

Curator:
Joshua Hossain Hashemzadeh

Photography:
Joshua Hossain Hashemzadeh

Catalogue Design:
Joshua Hossain Hashemzadeh
Chris Rivas

Special Thanks:
Juan Capistran
Rakeem Cunningham
Aaron Sandnes
Taravat Talepasand

LOS ANGELES
2600 S. LaCienega Blvd Los Angeles CA 90034 310-842-3892 info@baikart.com www.baikart.com

SEOUL
42 Palpan-gil, Jongno-gu Seoul 03054 Republic of Korea +82 70-7739-8808 info@baikart.com www.baikart.com